EDUCATION

Basic Education

The United States acknowledges that Pakistan's future economic prospects are integrally linked to improvements in the nation's education systems. High quality basic and higher education gives students the cognitive skills they need to prosper in the job market.

To assist the GOP's effort to improve Education, United States, through USAID will provide funding to enhance the delivery of education services in vulnerable areas. The program will focus primarily on improving access to education through infrastructure improvements, reconstruction of schools in flood-affected districts, technical assistance to the provincial Departments of Education, and funding school councils in target districts. The program will help strengthen provincial governments' abilities to deliver quality education and empower communities to be involved in the basic education of their children. Where capacity or transparency concerns would result in too high a risk for resources to be put through provincial government mechanisms, assistance will be provided through international and local contractors or NGOs. For example, in Sindh, a portion of the resources is going through the Provincial Government for school construction while other activities, such as community mobilization will be implemented by an NGO.

FY 2011 funds will be used to continue basic education programs which support improved teacher education and professional development by providing institutional and academic support centered on student achievement and learning outcomes.

Higher Education

USAID will support higher education through the Centers for Advanced Studies Program. FY 2011 funds will support the establishment of three centers, in the areas of agriculture, energy and water, at three distinct Pakistani universities, which have been selected in conjunction with the Higher Education Commission, through a rigorous third-party assessment. The Centers will be the product of a series of highly focused, long-term, and mutually-beneficial partnerships between leading Pakistani and American universities. USAID anticipates that the Centers will train 300-400 professionals a year within four years of the start of the program. Activities include professional/leadership development, participant training, academic linkages, in-country scholarships, infrastructure and equipment improvements, and American-Pakistani university partnerships. USAID will implement through Pakistani and U.S. universities and local Pakistani contractors.

Indicators used to measure results:

- Number of primary school classrooms with class-room level reading interventions.
Results Achieved to date: 11,000
- Number of teachers, educators, teaching assistants, and tertiary faculty whose skills are strengthened through USG-supported education programs.
Results Achieved to date: 4,741

ECONOMIC GROWTH & AGRICULTURE

USAID has started a new Agribusiness Project to improve the competitiveness of livestock, dairy and horticulture value chains in Pakistan by increasing productivity; improving storage, processing and handling; strengthening market linkages; and increasing trade. FY 2011 funds will help link farmers to new technologies, practices and financing. Livestock, dairy and horticulture were chosen because of the potential for growth, jobs and benefit to small farmers, particularly women. This program will build upon outcomes from the Firms program, discussed in detail later in this section. Key objectives include: a) improved efficiency in agricultural production, processing and marketing; b) increased on-farm and off-farm employment opportunities for rural and urban residents; c) expanded foreign and domestic direct private investment in agriculture and agribusiness activities; d) increased producer and processor incomes; and e) improved national food security. Anticipated partners include the private sector, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs - including but not limited to farmer and trade organizations), provincial governments and financial sector entities. A portion of these funds will support the on-going Smallholder Dairy Project implemented by the Dairy Rural Development Foundation.

USAID will further support development of specific sectors by continuing the Firms program. This program aims to undercut one basis of extremism by improving the business environment and developing internationally competitive firms to accelerate sales, investment, and job growth, which is being implemented through local public and private institutions. Specifically, the program has helped Pakistan identify and remove constraints to private sector development and job growth in targeted locations through improved GOP planning and budgeting, policy reform per international best practices, and streamlined regulations and procedures at the national, provincial and district levels.

FY 2011 funds will fund the Agriculture Policy Project. The project will promote an improved macroeconomic and sector-enabling environment focused on: 1) open markets, private investment and trade; 2) improved water management and irrigation; 3) poverty reduction and job creation; and 4) increased agricultural productivity. The project will strengthen Pakistani policy institutions to provide ongoing analytical expertise, policy advice, and advocacy going forward. A portion of the program will support government reform efforts to remove trade barriers, facilitate regional trade.

FY 2011 funds will also be used for interventions to help reposition Pakistan's economy and put it on a more globally competitive footing.

Indicator used to measure results:

- Number of rural households benefitting directly from USAID interventions (including rehabilitation of communal irrigation structures and flood-damaged fisheries and hotels, provision of training and business support services to micro-entrepreneurs, and supply of tools, livestock, feed, and seed to conflict-affected families).

Result Achieved to date: 701,341
